Caption: This picture uses arrows to show that a large number of US immigrants are coming from all over the world, most specifically African and Asian countries. Immigrants from India, Burma and the Philippines, among others, have a great presence in many states.

Thoughts: This chart really surprised me, as I had previously thought that, even excluding Mexico, most immigrants would be coming from Central and South American nations. This chart showed that once you exclude Mexico, places like India, China, Burma, the Philippines, Ethiopia, and Somalia make up the greatest number of immigrants in many states, which shocked me.
